welcome to term 2, 2019

A question to ask yourself. When was the last time you learnt anything?

Several years ago researchers in the UK asked this question of the adult population. Fascinatingly, over 80% of respondents indicated they had not learnt anything new in the previous 12 months. Something very hard to believe. Surely, there is the purchase of a new television, smartphone or computer? With each new piece of equipment requiring learning in how to use them?

Additionally, learning creates new knowledge and is transferable as your own wisdom. An example might be utilising your knowledge to teach someone else how to use that new laptop. If you reflect along these lines, you'll appreciate the many things you have learnt and taught.

Now you're asking, so what?

Well, learning equals improved knowledge leading to heightened wisdom and we also must recognise, like it or not, that we live in a knowledge-based economy. An economy that rewards for the depth and breadth of our knowledge both financially and in the simple joy of learning. Therefore the question for you is, what have you learned lately? Any blind spots or gaps that need attention? We only know what we know.

Like to know more?

Contact WRCC; increase your knowledge and deepen your wisdom.

See you at the College soon.
